Genetic Defects : BE AWARE!!!

Tibial Hemimelia (TH) and Pulmonary Hypoplasia Anasarca (PHA) are genetic defects associated with the club calf industry. TH is a disorder that occurs in Shorthorn and Shorthorn related cattle in which there is an absence of or abnormality of the tibia (tibial = bone b/w hock and stifle in rear leg). PHA is a condition in which the fetus has poorly formed lungs (pulmonary hypoplasia) and excessive retained fluid (anarsca). This genetic defect is primarily found in maine & maine cross cattle. Both conditions are lethal. GCCPA is doing its part in awaring its members and readers about the prescence of these disorders in the cattle industry. For more information see TH and PHA info on www.showsteers.com

FDA Says Meat and Milk from Cloned Animals are Safe for Food Supply

On December 28, 2006, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) released its draft risk assessment – including comprehensive studies – which concludes that milk and meat from cloned cattle, pigs and goats are in fact safe for human consumption and, therefore, do not pose a safety risk to the global food supply. The FDA's panel of independent scientific advisers and a National Academy of Sciences committee have conducted numerous risk assessments, examining hundreds of individual samples to determine the physical properties of the milk and meat from cloned animals. In comparison to conventionally-bred animals, no differences were found in the physical composition of cloned animals, their offspring and their meat and milk.

The release of this risk assessment begins a 90-day period of public comment, at which time the FDA will review and eventually formulate their final ruling. Meanwhile, the voluntary withholding of meat and milk from cloned animals and their offspring remains in place, as requested by the FDA.

“Confirming the safety of meat and milk produced from clones and their offspring is a milestone in the advancement of breeding and developing superior genetics for food production in the U.S. and around the world,” says Dr. David Faber, president of Trans Ova Genetics. “The use of cloning technology in beef and dairy reproduction will allow breeders to advance the quality, consistency, health and safety of milk and meat by allowing specific propagation of the genetics that lead to better products.”

For example, by selecting the best animals and applying cloning technology, club calf breeders can then choose multiple matings to make with these animals, creating the next generation. The most elite, upper-tier of the genetic pyramid will be the likely future cloning candidates, allowing the influence of those genetics to improve breeding herds striving to produce the next generation of show winners.

“We feel that the FDA study is an important announcement and one that will help cattle producers continue to be leaders and stewards of a healthy, humane global food supply,” Faber says.

Trans Ova Genetics is dedicated to helping club calf breeders better understand cloning technology. Here are some common questions about cloning:

What is a clone?

A clone is a genetic twin of the original animal that provides the tissue sample from which a cell line is made. Cloned animals are not genetically modified or genetically engineered. The cloned animal has the exact same chromosomal DNA – genetic material – as the original animal.

How does the cloning process work?

Cloning starts with the harvest of the original animal's tissue – usually a simple ear punch – to grow a new cell line. This tissue can be cryogenically preserved and permanently stored to provide a genetic blueprint of the animal. Many breeders have chosen to genetically preserve their most valuable animals, so that they have the option of cloning them in the future. This is just like insurance for a breeder's best animals.

The next step in the cloning process involves using a donor cow's oocytes (eggs), removing the nucleus and genetic material, and then transferring source cells, grown from the cell line of the original animal's tissue sample, into the donor oocytes. This makes embryo copies of the original animal. Trans Ova Genetics then transfers the embryos into synchronized, health-certified recipients, just like with embryo transfer (ET) or in-vitro fertilization (IVF). The resulting calves will be clones – or genetic twins - of the original animal.

Why would cattle breeders want to clone their animals?

Using cloning technology, breeders can duplicate the animals that contribute the most value in their herds. Most industry experts expect that cloned animals will be used for intensive breeding and genetic purposes, not specifically for meat or milk production. Cloning can be an effective part of a strategic breeding program, allowing the extension of elite genetics for embryo and semen production that will help breeders to further leverage the lifespan and generational influence of their very best genetics. For example, a club calf breeder might clone a show-winning steer who is obviously unable to produce semen. The new, cloned calves from his cell line will be bull calves, capable of producing sperm carrying genetics identical to those of the show-winning steer. Or, a breeder may clone an influential cow so as to increase mating and marketing opportunities from her.

How does cloning affect the genetic diversity of cattle breeding populations?

Cloning and the use of cloned animals in a breeding program must be managed just like A.I. in order to ensure lack of genetic diversity doesn't become a limitation. Furthermore, cloning technology can allow for the preservation of all genetics, and in particular those of unique, diverse bloodlines that may otherwise be lost or missed in traditional genetic selection programs. Using cloning technology, outcross genetics can be preserved to help diversify the population. The production of a clone does not offer genetic gain from the previous generation of parents per se, but it does greatly increase the opportunities for multiple mating selections that can, in turn, create significantly greater genetic gains.

Does Trans Ova Genetics expect more producers to clone their animals?

With recent FDA assessments confirming the safety of clones and their offspring in the food system, Trans Ova Genetics does expect the interest in and application of cloning to increase. However, even now, cloning will remain a technology suited exclusively for the most elite tier of genetics and cloned individuals will represent only a fraction of a percentage of tomorrow's cattle breeding foundation.

--Christina Jorgensen

Trans Ova Genetics would be glad to answer any questions club calf breeders may have about cloning technology. More information can be found at www.transova.com or by calling 1-800-999-3586.

Thanks to Dr. David Faber, President of Trans Ova Genetics, for his contribution to this article.

Requirements for Calves to be GCCPA Tagged

It's important that all members know the requirements for a calf to be tagged with the official GCCPA eartag. The rules are listed below:

1. Calves must be bred and born on a member's farm, or
2. Owned and born on other premises (example – you own a cow that is at an ET center in (Georgia or another state), or
3. Calves are eligible from the purchase of bred cows or frozen embryos only if bred cows or embryos are purchased from another GCCPA member, and the new owner shall be listed as Breeder on the GCCPA point sheet.
4. Only dues paying members are eligible to purchase tags. (Exhibitors can not pay dues and buy tags for an individual they purchase the calf from.)

From the snow covered pens of the National Western,
to the historic American Royal,
to the green shavings of the

North American,
we are fortunate to travel to the major livestock shows in America.

Last year alone we worked 38 different livestock sales. From sorting the stock, to doing the clerical work up front, to buying cattle/hogs for our clients, we sometimes made 3 sales a week. During much of the springtime we are either preparing sale cattle, slicking off the herd, breaking calves for sale or hunting a show calf for a junior exhibitor. Throughout the year, Holly spends some time taking photos for purebred sale catalogs and promotional advertisement, and then stays up half the night creating ads for various purposes. During the GA show season we attempt to make many of the larger youth events. We can't remember how many calves we touched in Perry this year. At other times Todd is on the phone taking semen orders and coordinating how to get it to our customers. During all of this with the help of our family, we maintain a cowherd of our own. We strive to breed practical cattle with balanced traits, functionality and eye appeal in mind. At Oleo Ranch, we try to make awesome females and hope their brothers will be pretty good too!

Amongst all of this we meet a lot of people, make a lot of friends, and keep the roads hot.

Some think we're crazy,
some say enjoy it while you're young,
others wonder if we get burnt out.

Call it a profession, call it unemployed,
it is our lifestyle we work together everyday and enjoy what we do.

It is the people that make the lifestyle what it is.

Thanks to those who keep us busy!
